Those who have used it say that Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar is wonderfully remedial in all cases where the organs of respiration are affected, and that its action is unusually rapid. A WIDOW'S SUIT.

Damages for Crushing the Life Out of a Lad

A special jury is empanelled to-day in Judge Thayer's Court for the trial of a widow's damage suit against the Bridge and Tunnel Railroad Company. John Brown, a lad of twelve, was in the employ of the St. Louis Beef Canning Company and traveled with the employes living on this side of the river to the company's works in East St. Louis in trains especially provided by the Bridge Tunnel Company. On the 9th day of September last the lad jumped on the tender of the locomotive hauling the workmen's train across the bridge and by some means he fell under the wheels, sustaining injuries which resulted in death. The mother of the boy brought suit and introduced testimony for the purpose of showing that the lad was thrown off the tender, while on the part of the company it was claimed to be an accident, and it was further contended that he had no right to be traveling on the tender. A jury in a former trial of this case failed to agree, and it is reached again before a special jury to-day.

Good for Goode.

It will be remembered that Joe Banks shot and killed his wife through a window at Rock Springs, while she was at work, on the 24th of March, 1880. He was convicted of murder in the first degree and sentenced to death. The Supreme Court to-day has reversed and remanded that decree. All the credit for this action on the part of the Supreme Court is due to Mr. Goode's presentation of the case. It will be remembered that Mr. Goode was censured for his absence in Washington at the time during this trial, but this reversal and the fact that he has paid all the expenses of the suit out of his own pocket thoroughly vindicates him.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

A Strike—Bryant's Fence Again Occasions Much Excitement.

The heaters at the Little Rolling Mills entered on a strike last night in pursuance to an order from the Amalgamated Iron Workers from the East. The bolt cutters and a few other branches of the business can continue operations a few days, but at the expiration of that time all operations must cease unless a compromise is effected.

The trouble about that fence of Bryant's across the Collinsville plank road, which has caused so much excitement for the last few months and nearly resulted in wholesale bloodshed on several occasions, was resumed with greater vigor than ever this morning. The last skirmish, which occurred a few weeks ago, resulted in Bryant being held to appear before the Grand Jury on the charge of attempted murder. Louis Gross worked strenuously against the injunction, forbidding the removal of the fence since the trouble, and his efforts were crowned with success this morning when the injunction was dissolved. The glad tidings was immediately telegraphed to East St. Louis, and Mr. Gross and several men started for the scene of trouble to remove the obstruction. Each man bears a striking resemblance to a walking arsenal, and the fence will probably be torn down before Bryant has time to offer much resistance. Mr. Bryant, however, has repeatedly expressed a determination to maintain his rights or die in the attempt, and should a few loads of buckshot be emptied into the aggressors the event would not be wholly unexpected to those most intimately acquainted with both parties. When the news of the movement on foot reached the police station a few men were detailed to guard the place while the fence was being removed and prevent bloodshed if possible. The whole town is in a state of excitement over the new move and are anxiously awaiting further developments.

BROKEN VOWS.

"The die is cast," once more our pathways part,
Never again to meet in happiness or pain,
You trifled with and vainly strove to crush
The heart that to your wiles will ne'er respond again.

Yes, far apart our separate ways now lead,
Nor will they meet again in tenderness or strife;
The love from out the heart has gone, indeed,
On which your own once looked to for its life.

I had not dreamed such treachery could dwell
Within the shrine that I had placed so high,
And when from off its lofty pedestal it fell,
I wildly prayed that I with it might die.

I sadly mourned o'er hopes that once looked bright,
That now lie buried in an ashy grave,
And sunshine that has turned to blackest night—
The sunshine and the hopes I could not save.

But let them go—the foolish dream is past,
And my weak heart has now grown proud and strong;
I have forgot the love that could not last,
But I can ne'er forgive thy treachery and my wrong.

CHARES LEVINS.

ENGLISH AUTHORITIES.

American Writers Place Too Much Dependence on Them.

From the Boston Advertiser.

With a certain condescension which is curious rather than provoking, and far more amusing than disagreeable, English publicists high and low are in the habit of giving advice to the United States, and the least prejudiced of Englishmen look upon Americans as somewhat colonial. In their opinion America is indeed a branch of the English family; but the sapling does not display the noble proportions of the true and original oak. They allow that America represents English blood; but the blood is supposed to represent inferior qualities, if not deterioration. They vote America a success in so far as Americans are like Englishmen. For illustration it is sufficient to point to almost every book on the United States written by English people, most of whom disguise their condescension under the cloak of real kindness and good feeling. On the other hand, Tocqueville's book on our institutions and Holst's on the history of our Constitution have never been matched by English writers. To the typical English mind it sounds like an aspiration rather than like an attainment that America is a nation precisely as France is, and that this nation is socially, as well as politically, unlike the English nation with which it has so much in common, and to which it is bound by so many ties of kinship and descent, affection and gratitude. This condescension on the part of England precludes resentment, and America calmly waits for the future day when Englishmen will see their way clear to a reconsideration of their opinions about America.

Meanwhile, the fact that the two nations have one language is at the same time a blessing of the greatest value, and in some subordinate matters a slight drawback. It is worth while, in the face of recent events, to point out in what that drawback consists. We obtain our information on the European continent chiefly through English sources, and Americans do not always make a proper allowance for this fact. The many articles, dispatches and letters on Russia, recently printed in this country, have an English admixture, and English writers view Russia very naturally and legitimately from an English point of view. But America can not share in that position. England and Russia are rivals who expect to come to blows, sooner or later, in Europe or in Central Asia. America and Russia are not rivals, and they can be on terms of cordial friendship. The Tunisian affair has to Americans a logical interest only; to England it has a practical interest which must color all English views on the little Commonwealth. And is not England in part responsible for a certain aversion with which many Americans look upon the Austrian system of government? What Mr. Gladstone said of Austria in his Midlothian speeches did not sound half so prejudiced and wanton to America as it sounded to the nations of continental Europe. Our information on Turkey is chiefly English.

It would be illegitimate to press this point very far, for we are not altogether English dependents, and English authority is by no means always misleading. But one somewhat glaring illustration should not be omitted here. Within recent years it has become the fashion to call a systematic knowledge "science." Let a man write a good book on the management of a library and he calls it a scientific treatise. There are sciences of mythology, theology, history, government, politics, sociology, medicine, botany—no end of them. And when certain economists succeeded in formulating the principles of English trade and commerce, they called it the science of political economy. The popular notion that science is a demonstrable truth which compels assent is correct, and by an easy, though false, inference, political economy was hailed as pure science which it would be useless to question. It had to be ascertained only like a problem in vulgar arithmetic. But men who respect words know that political economy is not a science, and from the nature of the thing can not be a science. It is history, or a rule of conduct learned by experience; but it is not scientific. Hence a political economy which is correct in one country is not for that reason correct in every other country. English economy for England, American economy for America, just as rules for a cotton mill do not work well in a shoe factory or a boiler shop.

The fact that English rules of economy have ever been received in this country as scientific truth is due also to the fact that the English thinkers have led in these subjects. But that fact does not make Cobden, Mill and Bright good leaders for all mankind. England has also led in scholarship. Yet our students go to Germany for Latin and Greek, to France for painting, and to Italy for vocal music. So, in fact do the English themselves. But in economy and in numerous matters of current information many Americans rely on English authorities, particularly when those authorities have scientific pretension, and a strong following in their own nation. The national element which characterizes the English is a part of their strength, their honor and their glory, but the national element of England and that of America are separate. In economy, in politics, in society, in history, and in destiny England and America are two nations almost rivals, and it is to be hoped that they will always be friendly rivals in what is most honorable, most wholesome and most useful in making each nation truly independent and sovereign. England is welcome to her condescension, and she will be thrice welcome to it as soon as Americans are strictly independent of English knowledge. This independence requires that all knowledge be received at its true value, and that local truth be not mistaken for universal truth. It is no small thing that this country has direct access to all English publications; but this country cannot safely mistake English for American elements.

Hayes as a Private Citizen.

Bellefontaine (O.) Cor. Cincinnati Commercial.

I had an opportunity yesterday, after the memorial day exercises in this beautiful and thriving town, to take a long drive with ex-President Hayes. It was 5 o'clock in the evening, and the clouds which had lowered over the cemetery during the ceremonies of the afternoon had evidently emptied their rain in the immediate vicinity, though not upon the town itself. The air was cool and refreshing, and the long shadows that were cast over the fields and roadways made driving exhilarating and enjoyable. General Kennedy, the master of ceremonies, had suggested a visit to the farm of Uncle John Hoge, which is located, he said, "on the highest ground in the State of Ohio. The geologists," he continued, "have placed a stone upon the knoll to mark the point and from it the view in all directions is something wonderful. In clear weather the horizon is visible in all directions, and trains on the Pittsburg road, sixty miles distant, are plainly visible." A party was soon made up. Judge West said he had heard that story told many times, but for one he had never seen it realized. He, with Governor Foster and General Kiefer and Mr. Key, of Bellefontaine, occupied a carriage together, while Mr. Hayes with Mr. Martin, also of Bellefontaine, and a few newspaper correspondents occupied another. Mr. Hayes occupied the rear seat in the barouche with Mr. Martin. I had not seen him for nearly three months. On that occasion he was seated just as on this, in an open carriage. He had entered the vehicle, as President of the United States, to escort his successor from the White House to the Capitol. It must have been

A MEMORABLE RIDE.

It was the last ride he ever took as chief executive of the nation. Mr. Hayes is looking thinner, I think, than when he left the White House. His face is tanned with exposure in the sun, and his hands show marks of freckles, which have come since he discarded affairs of State for private enterprises. There are streaks of gray in his hair and whiskers, and, though Hayes never allowed his business to worry him as Garfield does, he shows the marks of time.

Speaking of Mrs. Garfield's sickness and the statements that the condition and location of the White House had much to do with it, Mr. Hayes took occasion to say that he believed the statements unfounded. I had, during much of my time at the White House, a family of twenty persons, and during the entire four years I never had a case of sickness under the roof. There are times when the buildings in the locality of the White House are all more or less unhealthy, but at that time there is a place provided for the President at the National Soldiers's Home on the Potomac. There is a house fitted up expressly for him, and when he is not there it stands empty.

FALSELY CONDEMNED.

A Prisoner Appeals to the Man Whom He Was Accused of Murdering.

From the Cleveland Leader.

The receipt of a letter by Constable Lew Whitney, of Justice Peck's court, from Frankfort, Ky., yesterday, revealed one of those strange, though now not uncommon cases where men have been tried and sentenced for crimes of which they were innocent, merely on circumstantial evidence. To be sure the testimony was very strong, but there was nothing positively direct to criminate the defendant. Mr. Whitney told the story of the man who writes for assistance, and it is rather an interesting one. From the year 1875 to 1877 Mr. Whitney was engaged in the United States Secret Service in looking up counterfeiters principally in and about Casey county, Ky. For the success of his labors he found it necessary to have the services of a man who "knew the ropes" and who would at the same time be true to the interests of the service. In looking about for such a person ex-Secretary Bristow of Louisville recommended the appointment of John Loard, a desperate character who had just been acquitted of a heinous offense, Mr. Whitney thinks for murder. Mr. Bristow had defended Loard on the trial, and probably well knew the man he recommended. Loard received the appointment and engaged in the work with Whitney, proving himself true to the service, and succeeded in bringing to light scoundrels that it was thought impossible to reach. Loard was one of the boldest of the cracks in his time, was sharp and shrewd, and knew the ways of the counterfeiters as well as the hunting dog knows the scent of the fox. Whitney said he could not have obtained a better assistant than he found Loard to be. He was untiring in his efforts, brave and determined. In 1877 Mr. Whitney left the service and came to Ohio, finally reaching Cleveland, and soon lost all track of Loard. About a year ago he heard that his old assistant was in some kind of trouble in Kentucky, but did not know what, and the matter soon passed from his mind. The letter he received yesterday, though, made matters plain. It seems that something over a year ago the bones of a murdered man were found in Casey county. None knew what had become of Whitney, and the remains answering the description of the missing man exactly; it was asserted that they were identical. Loard had been under police surveillance for some time, and the suspicion gained ground quickly that he was the guilty party. Loard was arrested and held in jail. At the coroner's inquest over the remains of the murdered man, witnesses swore positively that L. B. Whitney was the man whose lifeless body, or what was left of it, lay before them. It was brought out in evidence in the trial that Loard was employed by Whitney for two years; that Whitney carried considerable sums of money about his person occasionally, and that Loard was well aware of the fact. Other circumstances tended more or less to thicken the web about Loard. The sudden disappearance of Whitney, etc., were shown, the final result being that Loard was sentenced to the State Prison for life, which sentence he is now serving out. By some means he learned that Whitney was in Cleveland, alive and well, and sent the letter.

GENERAL NOTES.

Montreal temperancers have established a vigilance committee and detectives as a terror to the Sabbath-breaking saloon keepers.

The first religious body to formally adopt the revised New Testament was the Congregational association of Marlboro, Mass., but the vote was afterward reconsidered.

Subscriptions to the amount of 155,000 have already been made to the fund for the musical festival in New York next year, and the sum is to be raised to $75,000 or $100,000.

A bill has been passed by the Michigan House providing a fine of $1,000 and imprisonment for a year for those who publish accounts of indecent offenses, murders or executions.

Electric lightning is in successful operation on more than sixty steamers on the Mississippi River and its tributaries. It is believed to add much to the safety of that kind of traffic and traveling.

Complaints are made that the proprietor of the eating house at the railroad depot in Utica charges an exorbitant price for meals. Twenty-five cents for a loaf of bread and ten cents for half a pint of milk are specimen figures.

A new road to San Francisco through Arizona runs for 60 miles along a basin that is 250 feet below the level of the ocean. This region has two to four feet of salt and alkali covering its surface. The ground is perfectly white.

The Paymaster of the Cincinnati Southern Railroad Company systematically held back the employes' wages, and then lent the money on his own account at usurious interest. But the business did not pay, for it caused him to lose his place.

One of the passengers on the ill-fated Victoria stated that a number of youths on the upper deck took delight in keeping up a rocking motion by moving from side to side, while the others shouted gleefully: "Let her sink; we'll only have to wade ashore."

A building is about to be erected in Chicago upon the spot where the great fire of 1871 started, and the historical society of the city is taking steps to have a memorial tablet placed upon it, and also to place a tablet or monument at the northern terminus of the fire.

A Boston lawyer did a lively business for a while by promising to get petty offenders off for $50 each, $10 of which, he said, went to the District Attorney, $10 to the Justice and $10 to himself. He aimed to secure only clients who would be acquitted anyhow, and his exposure came when some of them were convicted.

The Springfield Republican warns all men who live by daily work not to count too much on the present "boom" of employment lasting, and reminds them that the great immigration is daily adding to the number of those ready and willing to work at cheap rates, who will depress prices and make work the harder to get by multiplying those who want it.

The post office and store at Nortonville, Kas., was raided on Monday night by masked burglars, who overawed the store-keeper, C. C. McCarthy, and his clerk and made off with some portion of the safe's contents.

SOMETHING FOR TOXOPHOLITES.

What Dr. Carter Says of the Indian Use of Bows and Arrows.

From Forest and Stream.

"You see," said Dr. Carver, as he deposited a whole sheath of brightly-feathered arrows on a table, took off his umbrageous felt, and drew up a chair: "I must be shooting something or other all the time. If it isn't a Winchester, it's a bow and arrow. Pretty, they are, but most too fine! Fancy things, these arrows, for handsome young ladies to shoot on grass plats at straw targets. Now an Indian arrow is a good bit longer—maybe thirty-two inches—and when a Sioux draws it chock up to the bow it fairly hums when he lets it fly. An Indian arrow has grooves cut in it behind the barb—that is to say, the ones they use in hunting,—so that the blood can flow; otherwise the wound would swell and spoil. The fighting arrows are nasty things. The barb is so put on the shaft that when it hits you the steel, the old hoop-iron, stays in the flesh when you go to pull out the arrow. Dear sakes, what ugly wounds I have seen them make! An Indian boy begins to handle a light bow when he toddles, maybe at four or five years. His bow is taller than he is. He shoots at everything around the camp. When he is twelve he uses sharp arrows. A boy must be strong at eighteen to use a man's bow. Now, a white man who takes an Indian bow for the first time has all he can do to bend it. It needs some strength but more knack. The bow is made straight. When it is strung, the cord, even when in tension, almost touches the bow. It is thick, some four and a half or five feet long—that is, their hunting bow—and has an extra stiffness by having sinews pasted on it. I have seen We-shessa-has-ka—that is, the long man—and he was the best of the Ogalalla Sioux, kill an antelope with his arrow at 125 measured rods. We-shessa-has-ka was nearly seven feet tall and a good Indian. On horseback broadside to a buffalo I have more than once known that Indian to send an arrow through a big cow. The arrow hung out on the other side. The bow for horseback and for war is a trifle shorter, and may be stiffer. You do not draw the arrow to the eye, but catch aim as I do when shooting from the hip. That can be acquired only by long practice. The string is drawn by the clutch of the whole fingers, though some of the tribes use the thum and three fingers. The long man could shoot an arrow in the air out of sight, and so can I. (The doctor pointed to an arrow buried up to the feathers in the ceiling of our office, his own peculiar ornamentation of the Forest and Stream sanctum.) I think that in a couple of months I could get into perfect practice, for I used to hold my own with any Indian on the Plains. Sometimes, after I had been shooting with my Winchester, an Indian would come up and show his bow, and tell me his bow was 'muchee good,' but then I used to take his own bow and beat him at it. To pass away the time when I was at the Brooklyn Driving Park, I bought an English bow and arrows of Holberton, and soon got into the trick of it. I hit blocks of wood thrown into the air quite as often as I missed them. The English bows and arrows are fancy but good. I would rather have an old Sioux one, made of hickory or ash, but the boss bow I ever owned was made of buffalo ribs. An Indian carries his quiver of arrows over his right shoulder, so that he can get his arrows quickly. When he has discharged one arrow, with the same motion that he uses in pulling the string he clutches another arrow. If he shoots one hundred yards he has three or four arrows in the air all going at the same time. It's great fun shooting at a bird with a long tail that flies over the prairie. Knock out his tail and his steering apparatus is gone. I have knocked the tail out of many a one, and so caught him in my hands when he tumbled."

Spiritualism in New York.

From a Letter to Springfield Republican.

Spiritualism seems to be spreading rapidly in this vicinity. A great many new converts to this faith, or science, or superstition, or whatever we may wish to call it, have been made hereabout during the past year. I have never heard spiritualism so much talked of, and discussed in private circles as I have of late, and I know a number of persons, now its adherents, who but a little while ago treated it with derision. What the cause may be I cannot pretend to say, though the presence in the city of a number of new and extraordinary mediums may have much to do with it. These mediums are reported to show things that cannot be accounted for in any possible way. They are, in some instances, lifted up to the ceiling bodily by an unseen power, their hands being held on each side; and if the circle is broken they are suddenly dropped down and badly bruised. At least such is their assumption and all indications are to this effect. Some of the mediums cause messages to be written on slates which have been freshly brought into the room, and have not passed from the hands of the buyers. The messages have been written, too, without visible pencil of any kind. In fact, many of the manifestations are pronounced to be of a new order, inducing believers to declare that the science of philosophy is steadily developing. It certainly ought to. One of the chief of objections to spiritualism as a philosophy is, and always has been, that those who examine it rarely make any advance. They see and learn as much in the first week as they can at the end of the fifth year. Notwithstanding all this, spiritualism has made wonderful strides, so far as belief goes, throughout civilization. It is less than forty-two years since the Fox girls attracted so much attention in Rochester by what was then termed spirit rappings. Since then the mania, philosophy, delusion or what not, has extended all over the country, and to every part of Europe, millions of people being convinced that its source is supernatural.

Men of intellect, sober reflection and learning seem to think that spiritualism involves some unknown law, only parts of which, and these only fragmentary, have as yet been disclosed. Whatever spiritualism may or may not be, its steady growth, especially among the orthodox, is worthy of note. Somebody who claimed to know what he was talking about, told me the other day, that there were fully 90,000 spiritualists here, within a radius of fifty miles, taking Union Square as a center—a statement that must be received with due allowance.

Remarkable Case of Disease.

From the Springfield Union.

Mr. Nathaniel Adams, whose death occurred Wednesday afternoon from scrofulous rheumatism, was the victim of a malady unparalleled in malignity and of suffering unequaled for years if ever in this region. For ten years he had not walked unaided, and for about eight years not at all. During the whole time he was subject to frequent special attacks of his complaint, each one of which was believed to be his last. On the occasion of one of these, two years ago, his physician announced to him that he could not live an hour, but Mr. Adams dismissed the doctor, took the case in his own hands and survived. Since then he has frequently been seen on the streets, moving about in a small propeller. At the time of his death Mr. Adams' lower limbs were withered away to the bones, save the knee joints, which were swollen to about double their natural size. His knee pans were drawn down to a position directly under the joints, his right foot drawn over and outward so that if he had stood erect he would have stood directly upon the side of his foot, and both legs were drawn up behind so that his feet occupied a position under and close to his thighs. His arms were also withered away and his fingers drawn under his hands entirely out of their natural position, and swollen with running sores. His weight was not over seventy-five pounds, while in health he turned the scales at over one hundred and fifty. Mr. Adams was considered by business men as one of the best accountants in the country, and was frequently appealed to to straighten out involved sets of books. Only last winter he was sent for to straighten out a set of broks for a Holyoke firm, which he did, saving thereby a large sum of money to the house. A prominent business man says that Mr. Adams would save enough in little things which ordinary bookkeepers would overlook to pay his salary. During the last two years Mr. Adams' sufferings have been agonizing beyond description, and physicians who have attended him say they have never seen, even in the largest hospitals of our largest cities, a case which begins to be a parallel of his. Mr. Adams bore his great affliction with religious fortitude.

A FUNERAL SENSATION.

A Frail Wife Denied the Privilege of Seeing Her Dead Husband.

Pittsburg Special to Cincinnati Enquirer.

A sensation was caused at the funeral services of Robert J. Smith, a well-known and wealthy jeweler of this city, which were held in Trinity Church, South Side, to-day. The church was filled with a fashionable audience comprising some of our best people. Among the numerous carriages which drove up to the house of the dead was one containing his wife. She had forfeited all claims to being called his wife by reason of her unfaithfulness. About six months ago he was divorced from her, as they had separated several months before. Since that time Mrs. Smith, who is a woman of voluptuous form and beautiful features, has been one of the queens of the demi-monde of this city. She lives in an aristocratic house of prostitution on Caldwell street. Accompanied by another frail sister, Lizzie Smith took a seat near the coffin of her former husband. She was dressed in deep black, and wore a heavy veil. During the funeral services she burst out crying, "Oh, my husband." When the ceremonies closed the lid was removed from the glass of the casket and the minister invited those present to look for the last time on the face of the dead. Lizzie, who, during all this time was seemingly more affected than any one in the church, moved frantically toward the coffin, and was within a few feet of it, when Mr. Smith, a brother of the deceased, threw his arms over the glass and prevented her from looking in, remarking:

"Go back. Keep away. You cannot see him."

Rev. McCready motioned her to leave, and said:

"Go away. You have no right to see him, and you shall not see him."

The woman made a desperate effort to get to the coffin, screaming:

"Oh, my God. I must see my husband. Stand aside, I will see him in spite of you. I will see him."

Mrs. Smith, the mother of the deceased, ordered her to leave, and Miss Smith, her daughter, shouted:

"Stay away! You ruined my brother, and you cannot look at him."

While the wildest commotion prevailed in the church, the lid was fastened to its place, and the frantic woman crowded and shoved toward the pulpit. Her carriage followed at the end of the cortege, and at the grave in the cemetery she made the most touching appeals to those who superintended the rites to allow her just one glance at the face of the man she had learned to love, but to whom, it was claimed, she also had been the occasion of so much domestic infelicity. The saddest chapter of the mournful narrative remains yet to be related. The impressive ceremonies had been rendered at the grave, the coffin had been lowered into the earth, the minister had said, "Dust to dust, and ashes to ashes," while a spadeful of clods had been dropped on the lid of the coffin, the friends in their carriages had deserted the place, and the grave-diggers had begun to fill in the earth, when Lizzie, the recreant wife, ran and looked in. The tears streamed down on the rough box, while she pleaded most earnestly to those about to allow her to see the dead man. This privilege was once more refused, and as the carriage which carried her there was being driven out of the cemetery, her cries were most heart-rending.

Cremation in Siam.

From the London Times.

The Princess Suntariat, one of the favorites of the King of Siam, and her infant daughter were drowned last year about forty miles from Bangkok by the upsetting of a barge. The remains were embalmed and kept about nine months, when they were cremated with imposing ceremonies at an expense of $300,000 in decorations and in the presentation of gifts. A correspondent of the Louisville Courier-Journal says that the rite took place in a cross-shaped building 200 feet in length, covered within and without with gilded cloth. All the principal people and the foreign representatives were present, and fine quarters and a free restaurant were provided. The fire was lighted by the first King, the second King also being present. After the funeral pyre had been consumed there were fireworks and athletic sports for ten successive nights. Among other representations was the lotus dance participated in by fifty men swinging colored lanterns.

During the entertainment each day limes, a species of the lemon, containing small silver coins and also tickets to a lottery, were scattered freely among the spectators. Many beautiful prizes were drawn by both natives and foreigners. The Buddhist priesthood were the principal gainers by this cremation. One hundred thousand dollars were distributed in gifts to these gentlemen of the yellow cloth. This was done to "make merit," with the hope that some might reach the spirit of the dead Princess Sun-an-ta-raht, as she wanders through the long travail of births and deaths that await her before she can find rest. When the crematory ceremonies were over the ashes and a few charred bones were tenderly gathered and placed in a golden urn prepared to receive them. This urn was made almost entirely of the jewels of the dead Princess, and a smaller one received the remains of the royal babe.

Reduction of the English Debt.

From the London News.

Every year, under the present circumstances, we apply seven or eight millions to the extinction of the debt by means of the sinking funds and terminable annuities. The charge for interest on the whole debt is about twenty-one millions annually; but the sums applied in the annual accounts, including sinking funds, vary from twenty-eight to thirty millions, any surplus beyond anticipated expenditures being wisely devoted to repayment of debt. Given a continuance of peace, the annual redemptions will probably greatly exceed the contraction of new debt. Mr. Gladstone, or his successor in the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer, may be able to make use of the improved standing of consols, arising largely from their steady extinction and consequent scarcity, to attempt a converting operation. This is an age of conversions of debt. The United States of America, which some years ago could only issue six per cent bonds, were lately in a position to borrow at 5 per cent, then at 4½, then at 4 per cent, and are now engaging to pay only 3½ per cent on a considerable part of the debt. Hungary, which lately issued 6 per cents below par, is now about converting them into 4 per cents, at a discount it is true, but at such a price as to effect an appreciable saving in the annual interest charge. France could with ease convert her 5 per cents into 4 per cent rentes, but with her singular policy of protecting classes at the cost of the community refrains from doing so.

The Trail of Ben Butler.

From the Chicago Tribune.

The Rt.-Rev. Joseph Napoleon Perche, the Roman Catholic Archbishop of New Orleans, claimed from the United States Government the sum of $4,000, with accrued interest thereon since 1862, on the ground that in that year, while yet a French subject residing in New Orleans, Gen. Ben. F. Butler, commanding the United States forces, destroyed property belonging to him worth $3,000 and subjected himself to arrest and imprisonment. It was claimed on the part of the Government that Dr. Perche was not entitled to any damages, as although he was a French subject in 1862, he became a naturalized citizen of the United States since 1870. The French-American Claims Commission, to whom the matter was referred for decision, held to this view, and rejected the claim on the ground that it does not come within the terms of the treaty, which only provides for the claims of French citizens. The decision covers many other cases involving a large amount of money.

BABY'S VISITORS.

My baby boy sat on the floor,
His big blue eyes were full of wonder,
For he had never seen before
That baby in the mirror door—
What kept the two, so near, asunder?

He leaned toward the golden head
The mirror border framed within,
Until twin cheeks, like roses red,
Lay side by side, then softly said:
"I can't get out; can you come in?"

LONDON BEAUTIES.

The Doings and Sayings of the Notables in the English Capital.

Walsingham's Letter in Philadelphia Press.

"The beautiful" Mrs. Cropper is recovering rapidly from the injuries sustained by being thrown out of a pony carriage. She is here with her mother, who entertains largely. Another fair Californian, Lady Hesketh, nee Flora Sharon, has just departed from town. She has been stopping at Brown's Hotel, Berkeley Square. Mr. Henry Roscher, of San Francisco, who is interested with Mr. J. E. Mitchell in mining maters, is also here with his wife. They came over by the City of Berlin, and their little daughter, a beautiful child three years of age, was the belle of a ship's company that included Mlle. Anna de Belocca, the Maplesons, etc. Mrs. Cropper, to return to the flower of the Californians here, began her reign as a "Beauty" last summer, when I saw her at a fete given at Kensington House. She was radiant in a white cashmere dress trimmed with lace, her fair hair crowned with a simple straw bonnet, and a gold bracelet, set with diamonds, emeralds and rubies, clasping her wrist. There, too, was Mrs. Langtry in yellow satin and plush. The queen of the P. B.'s is now here, but will shortly repair to the Isle of Jersey with her husband. I saw her at the first night of Juana simply attired in black brocaded velvet, with white lace in the low corsage—sufficiently low to disclose the loveliest of busts. At this famous fete was her and the Countess of Lonsdale's then cavalier servante, the youthful Earl of Shrewsbury, a handsome blonde boy, who has not yet attained his majority. He has, however, "gone it while he's young," his graceless grace has just eloped for the third time with a married woman. The poor Frou-Frou of his latest adventure is a Mrs. Monday, a very pretty woman and the mother of a daughter eight years of age. Her husband and brother overtook the heir of the Talbots and the infatuated lady at Nancy, France, and jumped into the railway carriage just as the train moved off from the station. No one knows exactly what occurred, but the lady emerged in a swoon, her brother supporting her, and the gay Lothario—poor "Charlie"—looked as though he had been smashed by a locomotive. Both eyes were blacked and he was very lame. Mrs. Monday was brought back to England by her brother, and poor Monday will, it is said, institute proceedings for a divorce. Lord Shrewsburry is laid up at present, but is likely to be more popular than ever when he emerges from his temporary retirement. He is "such a boy" and an earl among ladies is apt to be petted.

Mlle. Adalgisa Gabbi, who made her debut at Her Majesty's Theater and in London the other night, was very well received by a not over-numerous audience, including among its notabilities Mlle. de Belocca, Mrs. Swift and Mme. Roze-Mapleson, dressed in white silk striped with black, and looking a little tired from her voyage. Aida was given, with Mlle. Tremelli as Amneris, Galassi as Amonasro, and Runcio as Rhadames. Signor Novaro was to have been the Ramfis, but secured a release from this comparatively unimportant role in consideration of his never having sung in London before. His debut will be made in a more showy part. Mlle. Gabbi seemed nervous and her voice showed signs of fatigue, but she acts unusually well and sings with expressiveness. Her upper notes were peculiarly effective, and her mezzo voice elicited admiration. Some of the most spontaneous applause of the evening fell to Mlle. Tremelli and Signor Galassi. Signor Campanani was much missed as the hero, and it is complimentary to Mlle. Gabbi that she was so successful with the doubtful aid of such an indifferent substitute as Runcio.

Mr. Labouchere's suppression of names deprives a spicy anecdote in Truth of the general appreciation it would otherwise enjoy. He relates of the servant of a noble lord well known in the theatrical world (obviously Lord Londesborough) mistaking a very tall American lady for a very tall popular actress (Miss Helen Barry), and announcing her accordingly as she entered Lady Londesborough's drawing-room on the occasion of a dinner party. Before the matter was duly explained and set right her ladyship had rushed from the room with the exclamation: "I thought it would come to this at last!" I can match this with another apropos of the same noble lord. He was expected at a "high tea" in the artistic world, and the servant was duly enjoined to show him up with all consideration, but not to admit a person in an ulster who was expected to arrive from the country at about the same time and whose presence at this festivity was not desired. The servant "mixed those children up," and the consequence was that the unwelcome arrival was duly ushered in, whilst his Lordship, who unfortunately wore an ulster on this occasion, was ignominiously sent from the door without even the customary "cold potato," not to speak of oolong and small-talk.

Longfellow's Chat.

From the Philadelphia Press.

Longfellow has been talking with a correspondent about some of his poems. "I wrote the 'Hymn of the Moravian Nuns' at college," he said. "I read in a newspaper a story that the Moravian women at Bethlehem had embroidered a banner and presented it to Pulaski. The story made an impression upon my mind, and one idle day I wrote the poem. I called them Moravian Nuns because I had gathered from something that I had heard or read that they were called nuns. I suppose I should have said Moravian Sisters, but the change doesn't spoil the romance. I often felt a curiosity to go and see the people whose patriotic action furnished the theme for this poem." Longfellow said that "Evangeline" was suggested to him by a gentleman with whom he and Hawthorne were dining, and who urged the novelist to write a novel on the theme of the exiled young Arcadian girl who spent the remainder of her life searching for her lover. "I caught the thought at once," the poet said, "that it would make a striking picture it put in verse, and said, 'Hawthorne, give it to me for a poem, and promise me that you will not write about it until I have written the poem.' Hawthorne readily assented to my request, and it was agreed that I should use his friend's story for verse whenever I had the time and inclination to write it."

More Arctic Explorations.

New York Special to Chicago Tribune.

Lieut. Frederick F. Kislingbury, Eleventh United States Infantry, arrived to-day from Custer, Montana, and stopped at the Astor House. The Lieutenant has been selected by the Secretary of War to serve as second officer of the Lady Franklin Bay Expedition, commanded by Lieut. Greeley. Lieut. Kislingbury, when called upon for a statement of his plans and views in reference to the expedition, said that, as an army officer, it would not become him to be interviewed. From some of his friends, however, the most interesting facts relating to the expedition were obtained. The expedition will be composed of the commander and second officer, already mentioned: Lieut. Lockwood, the third officer; a surgeon, Dr. Pavy, at present at Disco, Greenland where he has been for over a year, and twenty-one enlisted men selected from the army for well-known bravery, strong physique, and exceptional ability, as well as disposition to endure the rigors of a three years' sojourn in the polar regions. The steam sealer Proteus will sail for St. Johns, N. F., on July 4, with the members of the expedition and three years' supplies on board, and after calling at Disco and receiving there 100 dogs and sleds, will proceed straightway to Lady Franklin Bay, arriving there the latter part of August. After landing the expedition there the Proteus will return to the United States, but every summer the Government will send up a steamer to provide reinforcements and new supplies, and bring home the men who may become disabled. The special object of the expedition is to establish a permanent polar colony for making scientific observations, and, in the course of their explorations, the officers will aim to move their settlement further northward, till the Pole itself, if possible, is finally reached. The landing where the first settlement will be made will be about 81° 40 minutes north latitude, and will be hundreds of miles away from any human habitation, unless it be that of the Jeannette wayfarers. Lieut. Kislingbury leaves here Wednesday morning on the steamer for St. Johns, where he will remain until the departure of the expedition from that place.

TEARING UP THE BIBLE.

Extraordinary Proposition of an Orthodox Protestant Clergyman.

Rev. Dr. Swing in the Chicago Alliance.

It so happens that all modern difficulties of any moment, in the direction of the Holy Scriptures, are not difficulties with a rendering, but with the subject-matter, however interpreted. There should be in the new version eliminations of whole chapters and whole books, on the ground that they make the sacred volume too large to be printed in good type and still be portable. A small Bible means that the type is almost microscopic. A popular Bible should be at once portable and of fair, clear type, and to make this possible a large part of the Old Testament should be omitted from the editions of the future.

Not only are the laws of the Mosaic state repealed and dead, and therefore unworthy of a place in this guide of the public, but they are the laws of a semi-barbarous age, and cast no little of their imperfection over upon the fair pages of the New Testament. The New Testament has suffered much from being found in bad company. Those treatises are valuable as being part of the history of the Jewish state, but not as being a part, much less a valuable part, of Christianity. Many of the Hebrew laws were so unjust that their presence in the popular Bible makes it essential that each clergyman and each Sunday school teacher shall spend much time in explaining the relation of Mosaic things to Christian affairs—an explanation to be made easier by a withdrawal of the cause. The laws about women and slaves are particularly unjust, and their presence in the good book will always complicate the inquiry: "What is inspiration?" If, as almost all Christian scholars will admit, those laws were the temporary statutes of a nation, temporary compromises between a horrid epoch and a kinder one in comparison, that legal literature should have lapsed into quietness along with the Hebrew, the Amorite, and Jebusite, and not be spread out to-day before our youth, as forming some part of the divine truths to be believed. Besides the savage injustice of some of those laws there is much that offends against the refinement of our more civilized times. No minister, no family, dares read aloud all of the Old Testament. It came from a far-off time, and jars like a discord upon the modern heart. The Bible has already been so deeply injured by the timidity of its friends that now—since the rage of a new version has come—it is high time a demand were made that the best of all books be set free from some of the weights which so impede its progress.

Other leaders will come along after a time to make changes of a more radical nature, and from their hands the Bible will come ready to be the hand-book of the Christians of the next century. The Bible will always live and always lead man.

English Travelers.

From the New York Herald.

Fresh American writers from abroad are apt at giving anecdotes about the peculiarities of English travelers, and they wonder at an Englishman's natural and honest demand for rights as a passenger, a theater-goer, or a hotel guest. An Englishman's courage to resent an indignity or demand an ordinary human right seems to our patient American people, who put up with all unnecessary evils, as check, impudence and arrogance. When an Englishman comes to this country and travels he sometimes makes preposterous demands, but he is used to setting up an English standard of conduct everywhere and believes in his home maxim, "When in Rome do as the English do." Nevertheless, let us not be too hasty in saying that the Englishman who looks out for himself alone, or for his servant, his dog and his bandbox, is "laying it on a little thick." Americans are the weak where the English are said to be strong. In a railway train on a cold, foggy morning recently, a uniformed lad, of the kind that whistles cruelly and eats maladorous peanuts, strewing the floor with shells like autumn leaves, was a nuisance to everybody, and to add to the general discomfort he opened his window upon all the shivering Americans, who said never a word. At last a modest, rosy-cheeked English girl went over to him and said: "Please put down the window."

BIG TIME TO ALTON.

ALTON, June 1.—Hunter Ben Jenkins, St. Louis: The Gem City made the run from St. Louis to Alton in one hour and forty-eight minutes.

N. B. HATCHER, Clerk.

A CHICAGO man has invented a new thing in the way of propulsion, and built a yacht fifty feet long to test it. He expects the boat to make eighteen miles per hour. There will be no engine on board, simply a boiler and pump, and the inventor says the craft will be propelled by either steam or cold water pressure—either can be used at pleasure. Through pipes connecting the boiler with chambers about, on and in the wheel, the wheel is turned, whichever it pleases those running the craft to employ. The buckets of the wheel are about the same shape and appearance as those of any ordinary wheel, but they are hollow, and the steam escapes through apertures on the ends. In a word, the plan of the invention brings the power employed to bear directly on the wheel without any engine, or, if there is anything like an engine about it, the wheel itself is the engine.

DUNCAN S. CARTER.—The many friends of Duncan S. Carter will be pained to learn of his death, which sad event took place at Helena, Montana, on last Monday. The intelligence was received here yesterday by a dispatch to Mullen & Hoppius from Capt. Ashley. Capt. Carter has been in poor health for several years, and the disease that carried him off was paralysis. He had been residing in Montana for some time past under medical treatment, and at the time of his death he was upwards of 60 years of age. In early life he followed the river as a steamboat clerk, and was on the noted steamer Aleck Scott with Capt. J. C. Swon. He was also for a period engaged in the steamboat butcher business, and later, was secretary of the famous Atlantic Line. His last business venture was in the pork business in company with Wm. Bartle. The steamer Duncan S. Carter, which was burned at the wharf with several other boats back in the sixties, was named after him. As a business man and citizen Capt. Carter was a prominent figure for many years in this community. He was noted for enterprise, clear sightedness and the strictest integrity. Those who enjoyed his friendship will learn with regret of his removal from this sphere of action, while they will also be forcibly reminded that the pioneers who made St. Louis what she is are quietly being gathered to their fathers. He leaves no family.

PERIHELION PERILS.

The Planets Swerving the Sun Off His Center Nearly a Million Miles.

Producing a Marked Decrease in the Terrestrial Temperature,

And Playing Havoc With Human Health.

The conjunction of the planets with the sun, it is reasoned by those who have made it a careful study, is having a very marked effect on that luminary. It is estimated that the sun has been drawn from its place 700,000 miles. If this is so the effect on the earth must be marked. As a matter of fact it is said by meteorologists that the average temperature during the past winter had been several degrees lower than for many years, and the effect upon humanity has been seen in a great increase of mortality. The winter has been a long one and a cold one. The summer promises to be a long and hot one. This means increased mortality. It is therefore of the greatest importance that the health should be carefully guarded. Do not permit the slightest approach of disease. It has become an admitted fact that nothing so thoroughly restores and keeps the body in perfect health as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure.

D. W. Bartine, M. D., D. D., who resides in Orange, N. J., after a careful experience, has given the following facts to the public:

Some three months ago I found myself suffering from Bright's disease—Albuminuria. By the use of a reliable test I found albumen in the urine, and in some slight degree in a few instances in a coagulated state. I suffered from dropsy, particularly about the ankles, slight pains about the kidneys, a derangement of digestion, great dryness of the skin, at times much thirst, and, of course, a gradual failing of strength. This was about the state of things when I commenced using Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. I took about six tablespoonfuls every day for a week, when I found all my symptoms decidedly improved, and at the end of two weeks it was difficult to detect any trace of albumen. Having imprudently taken cold, I had a slight relapse some two weeks ago, when I began again using the medicine, and am now as well as ever.

The conclusion from the above statement and the facts which accompany it must be evident. Disease is in our midst, and we must guard ourselves in time. A little precaution may save severe siekness, perhaps death.

JOSEPH PULITZER : : : PROPRIETOR.

111 NORTH FIFTH STREET.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE CITY

[Entered at the Post-Office at St. Louis, Mo., as second class mail matter.]

THERE is a vast difference between a corn-corner and a can-canner, but when a man gets squeezed in a corn corner he dances all the same.

THE New York Assembly refused to vote to-day in favor of a sine die adjournment. The members wish to enjoy the luxuries of a hot weather dead-lock.

THE feeble fire-gong in the POST-DISPATCH office is still a striking, or rather non-striking, monument to the gigantic incompetency of our Fire Alarm Telegraph management.

IT is understood that the contest at Albany is wearing fearfully upon Mr. CONKLING. No human pen can depict the condition of T. PLATT. He is totally unused to severe mental strains and was never caught in a political maelstrom before.

WHEN the city invited proposals for the city printing it neglected in its advertisements to reserve the right to "reject any or all bids," as is customary. It was understood that the contract would be let to the lowest responsible bidder.

IT is reported that the volcano of Vesuvius is taking on again. We have observed that natural phenomena is quite common when Mr. CONKLING is in trouble. The day after he retired from Canonchet two new spots appeared on the surface of the sun.

IT was announced by telegraph the other day that there was a meeting of Confederate bondholders in London. As they probably assembled to weep, the occasion must have been both solemn and impressive. Confederate bonds, in a good state of preservation, are now worth $2 a bale.

THE grey rats in the Republican office who are gnawing at the City Treasury do not seem disposed to drop their deciduous intellectual gum upon the opaque subject of city printing. A burglar getting over a back fence with his swag could not be more peacefully disposed nor more anxious to be let alone.

OUR esteemed contemporary, the Globe-Democrat, is inclined to rest a favoring eye upon an Elevated Railway for St. Louis. The scheme that strikes it most favorably is the one championed by the celebrated national politician and manager of St. Louis, CHAUNCEY I. FILLEY. This is so singular as to be almost striking.

MR. SCUDDER, of the City Council, may be a very honest and upright gentleman but we know him as the champion of the swindling Gas Compromise recently recommended to the Municipal Assembly. The public recognizes the POST-DISPATCH as the young Hercules that killed that hideous hydra. Put this and that together.

THE Cincinnati Gazette calls upon the taxpayers of the city to hold a Southern Railway indignation meeting. We can't see any necessity for that. Cincinnati has been a vast indignation meeting in perpetual session ever since the first shovelful of earth was tossed up in behalf of that ill-advised railway.

THE voting for Senator at Albany to-day does not seem to be improving the prospects of Mr. CONKLING. On the last reported ballot he received but 33 votes—a loss of two since yesterday. The stock of SANCHO PANZA PLATT shows a similar decline. It seems settled that Mr. CONKLING will hereafter be spoken of politically in the past tense.

THERE is too much water wasted in St. Louis. Garden and street hose are fruitful in this business. The servant washing the side-walk will often fling the hose in the gutter and let the water waste by the hogshead while he is fooling with the next door maid of all work. Men who go to church and believe BOB INGERSOLL an awful fellow sometimes seem to have no conscience in this matter of water waste. One has no more right to steal water than to break into a house, or rob another on the streets. He who lets his faucet in the water closet run is simply stealing from the poor city.

CONKLING quarreled with his political bread and butter. The more bitterly he is punished the better for the country.—[Cincinnati Commercial.

That is the doctrine. When the great leader is knocked down we wish to have him thoroughly stamped and disabled, so that he will not have vitality enough left in him four years hence to participate in the Presidential canvass in New York State. It is to be regretted that he did not have his political ribs kicked in last year. Mr. HANCOCK might be sitting in the White House with his feet cocked up now, listening to the prayers of embryotic Postmasters.

REFERRING to some casual off-hand remarks made by us last week in reference to Non-self and Evolution, the editor of the Kirksville Democrat says:

All fact is placed or founded in self, or the Ego, and this concept is the only unity of thought—for, as thoughts complex, so in turn do their sum as mind (as sequence) follow. And thus the mind as a whole is only a complexed Ego, or One—and thus it is that we derive the idea of self, and of the unknown, negatively, or antithetically.

We have no desire to be drawn into an acrimonious discussion but if the weather continues pleasant we are going to look into this thing. We cannot allow a radical statement of this character to go out to the world unchallenged.

THERE is an interesting piece of news in our Jefferson City special to-day. The Supreme Court has affirmed the action of the lower Courts, and Mr. ALANSON B. WAKEFIELD, the debonnaire sport, is now stewing within the walls of the Missouri Penitentiary. Two years of human misery loom up before him. Mr. WAKEFIELD, so far as we know, stands charged with two offences against society. While financially interested in the Grand Opera House in this city he painted out the portrait of SHAKSPEARE over the proscenium and inserted his own instead, and he committed perjury before the Grand Jury known in history as the Big Twelve. It was upon the latter charge that he was tried and convicted. Having exhausted all known legal processes it is presumed that Mr. WAKEFIELD will fall back now upon the mercy of our tender-hearted Governor. It is to be regretted that his busy life has met with a reverse that will tend to blight it, but it was due to the laborious, searching Big Twelve that somebody should be brought to grief and the Vicar WAKEFIELD stands out as the solitary victim—a sort of vicarious sacrifice as it were.

AN Ohio man named MCGREW, filling the office of Sixth Auditor of the Treasury, has been seized by the investigating octopus of the Postal Department and is now functus officio. He was not exactly a Star Router, but he knew that the Government was being plundered yearly of millions by the thieves of the Star Route system and he failed to raise his voice. It was his business to audit all accounts, and when a big job was on hand he had a convenient way of gazing abstractedly out of his office window while his chief clerk furnished the necessary signature. When Col. TURCHIN'S brigade entered Athens, Ala., during the war, the brave commander told the boys that he would shut his eyes for one hour. They took the hint and ripped the town up beautifully. They did not neglect, in their hurry, to leave some silverware where the Colonel could find it when he opened his accommodating optics. We would like to think well of MCGREW because he is an Ohio man, but we expect to go to our grave in the firm conviction that he occasionally received as much as a box of cigars for looking out of that office window at convenient periods.

IN the City Council last Tuesday night MR. SCUDDER moved that the bid of the POST-DISPATCH for the city printing be rejected on the ground that if carried into effect the city would be compelled to pay $1,600 more for its printing this year than it did last. A Card from Mr. Weigel.

ST. LOUIS, June 2, 1881.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The article of S. G. R., headed the "Forest Park Hatchery," in yesterday's P.-D., is, to express it mildly, not only rather acrimonious, but considerably wide of the truth—for a Sunday School man. The father of one of the "young children" arrested, Mr. Russell, acknowledged in the presence of the Mayor that his "infant" was eighteen years old, although rather small for his age." When his attention was called to the fact that copies of the ordinance regulating the public parks are conspicuously posted in various parts of the park which is the case), he claimed not to have observed any; and when further advised that really the publication of the ordinances in the paper doing the city printing was official notice, he exclaimed: "I do not allow my children to look at a newspaper." Mr. R.'s discrepancies further consist in stating that the Park Commissioners had a communication in the morning Republican which was not the case; that the keeper of the Park permits "roughs" to do as they please, and is in the habit of drawing a revolver.

The Mayor requested Mr. Russell to prefer charges against the keeper if he thought he had reasons for doing so, and assured him that justice would be done him, but Mr. R. declined to avail himself of this course and contented himself with asking the Mayor to order the dismissal of the cases against the two young men without having them go to trial. This the Mayor granted.

Respectfully yours,
EUGENE F. WEIGEL.

Advice to Horseback Amateurs.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I see a good deal of horseback riding in St. Louis. There are some good riders in the city, but many ride poorly. Now take a little advice, don't protrude your legs and feet far out and away from the beast which you bestride, but keep the leg and foot close in to the horse. Don't strain or stiffen the dorsal muscles but gracefully catch the motion of the horse, and you will find that you are rested, not exhausted, by the ride. Don't sit bolt upright, but gently sway with the horse, and you will win grace, ease and comfort. The rider and the horse must be one in motion and movement for good riding. Every saddle horse will be grateful for this advice for other methods tire him.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

As the ever ready champion against frauds, impositions, etc., I should like to ask you the following questions:

1. Is there any law compelling a business house to pay its monthly city bills on the 1st inst., or is it merely a custom?

2. Has any house paying its city bills on the 5th inst. any right to collect bills on the 1st inst.? I ask, because, out of twenty-eight collections this morning, I was "put off" till the 5th, 6th, etc., by all save eight.

Jay Gould's Blooming Picture.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Mr. Jay Gould's picture adorned the first pages of no less than a score of Sunday weeklies that reached the Times yesterday, and it is possible that the same epidemic seized some of the Sunday papers of the far West and South. The pictures, which present one likeness in all, make Mr. Gould look to be a bearded man of middle age, with broad, high brow and handsomely shaped head. His expression is that of a man who is inclined to be satisfied with things and who dosn't care whether school keeps or not.

THE BREWERS.

Meeting at Tivoli Hall of the Strikers This Morning—Communications.

The meeting of the striking employes of the city breweries which was to take place at Anthony & Kuhn's Hall this morning was at a late hour last night changed to Tivoli Hall. Between 9 and 10 o'clock about 150 of the strikers assembled in the Tivoli saloon and discussed the outlook and the probabilities of the employers granting their demands. At 10 o'clock Mr. Franz Jeanch, the President of the Union, called the meeting to order and explained that hereafter the meetings would take place in Tivoli Hall, on account of the hostility of Messrs. Anthony & Kuhn towards the Union. He further exhorted the men in a long and seemingly pathetic appeal to drink no more of Anthony & Kuhn's beer till they had granted the just demands of their employes. A long communication from Wainwright was then read, in which it was set forth that the men were only required to work two hours before breakfast henceforth, and their salaries would be increased to satisfy the demands of the Union. The men cheered lustily when the communication was concluded, and only ceased when one of the employes of Wainwright arose and stated that the men were given to understand that their demands had been granted, but when they attempted to quit this morning the foreman refused to allow them to do so. After considerable wrangling it was decided to appoint a committee of three to wait upon the men at Wainwright's and request them to quit work and give their support to the Union. Alexander Oswald, Charles Pils and Caspar Bender were chosen as the committee to represent the Union, and after receiving instructions how to proceed and implored to drink none of Wainwright's beer the committee departed on their mission. One of the men from the Excelsior Brewery stated that one of his fellow-workmen had proved a traitor to the cause, and after inducing him to join the Union immediately applied for his position. An angry debate in man followed, in which several parties took sides. Some were in favor of refusing to allow the man to re-enter the Union should he feel so inclined; others wanted to appoint a committee to wait on him, and win him back to the Union. The matter was finally dropped without either side understanding the intentions of the other. Nick Lueser then addressed the meeting, and after stating that he was happy to see all the breweries of the city represented, with the exception of Hyde Park, Klausman's of Carondelet and Helm's of East St. Louis, he exhorted the men to raise no disturbances whatever in the neighborhood of the breweries, and to be kind and courteous to those that have not joined the Union and to accomplish all their objects in a gentlemanly manner instead of by brute force. It was resolved that no man who had not served at least two years in and about a brewery should be admitted as a member of the Union. A few uninteresting remarks were made by the Vice-President, but as all business of the day had been disposed of and owing to the fact that the majority of the men had left the hall for the bar, the meeting adjourned till ten o'clock to-morrow morning.

It Was the Cat.

No. 913 North Sixteenth street is a boarding-house. This morning one of the boarders discovered that the vault in the rear was clogged with something, and Mr. Dyer, the landlord, sent his colored man to see what was the matter. The man, after fishing about for a few moments, rushed out upon the street and told the policeman upon that beat that there was a baby in the vault. The officer, accompanied by another policeman, hastened to make an investigation and shortly brought to light a dead cat. Thus a first-class sensation was spoiled.

Sensational Developments in the Lindell Avenue Baby Case.

A couple of negro boys playing in the vacant lot on Lindell avenue, west of Cabanne, made a queer find of lost property yesterday morning, when they came upon a broken cigar box, a bloody undershirt and a dead baby. The children at once notified their mother, Anna Larkins, a wash woman living on Stewart avenue, one block west of the Manchester road, and she called the attention of Officer Hays to the find. He brought the matter before the Coroner who upon investigation returned a verdict of death caused by abortion, and there the matter was ostensibly supposed to end. But Coroner Frank has not by any means given up the case. He is working quietly and privately upon it, and there is every indication that a most sensational eclarcissement will be given to the story. Although the witnesses examined at the inquest threw very little light upon the crime, new material is coming in. A colored woman, whose name is withheld, but who lives in the same neighborhood with the woman Larkins, was passing along Lindell avenue on the evening before last and at the crossing of Cabanne avenue was almost run over by a carriage with a gray team. This attracted her attention to the vehicle, which was a two-horse barouche with a gentleman sitting on the front seat and a lady on the back. The team was going very fast and the driver was paying no attention to it, but leaning back talking to the woman. She had something white in her hands, which, as the vehicle passed on above Cabanne, she pitched out. The woman saw the bundle as she passed by, but paid no attention to it, thinking it was only a bundle of old paper. As soon as the package was thrown out the team started off at a gallop. The negro woman thought that they were running away, but she saw the gentleman who was driving hit the horses several times with the whip.

Everything about the finding of the fœtus corroborates this story. The cigar box in which it was incased was smashed as though with a fall, while the paper and the bloody garment in which the body was wrapped were scattered along as though they had rolled over and over after falling. All the other evidence obtainable is that a gentleman and lady in a two-horse rockaway, rather of an old-fashioned build, drawn by an iron gray, came out as far as Delmonico's, had their horses watered without leaving their seats, and turned back and drove rapidly towards town.

Whether the occupants of that carriage will ever be discovered is a question upon which the ingenuity of the officers will be tested. The clue is a very slight one, but still it is a clue. Doubtless the two in the rockaway were friends or more probably relatives of the mother whose shame was thus covered from the eyes of the world.

A SPLENDID SYNAGOGUE.

The New Temple of the United Hebrew Congregation Dedicated.

The new house of worship of the United Hebrew Congregation consecrated at the southwest corner of Twenty-first and Olive streets this afternoon is a valuable addition to the many elegant church edifices of St. Louis. The temple is built in the Romanesque style of architecture. The front is stock brick finished in stone and is sixty-three feet on Olive street. At either end rises a tower. The western one is domed and the eastern finished in battlement cornice work. In both of these are large entrances to the auditorium and class-rooms on the first floor. The western tower is 150 feet high to the summit of the dome. The lower portion of the tower is occupied with four class rooms divided by glass partition; elevated by pulleys, leaving a hall 50x60 feet. Above this the elegant auditorium of the temple is situated. The walls are twenty-four feet high, the ceiling rising in an arch, the apex of which is fully forty feet from the floor. Back of and above the tabernacle is the organ and choir facing the congregation. The arched roof is supported by plastered brackets no column obstructing the view of the speaker. A more artistic and tasty piece of work than the tabernacle of the new temple is not to be found in any of the West End churches. It is richly carved, painted in gloss white and gilt. A twenty foot diameter rose window, glazed with stained glass and leaded over the center of the front and between the towers, lights the bright auditorium. Over this window is a semi-circular stone on which is cut "Unite Hebrew-5640-Congregation." At the apex of the front is a column cornice twenty-five in length and extending clear above the roofs, fourteen feet. The building extends ninety-seven feet back on Twenty-first street, in the rear portion of which are the ante-rooms and the sexton's quarters, near the main entrances, are the lavatories and other conveniences. Both from the exterior and interior this house of worship presents a beautiful appearance. There is nothing massive in the structure but the style in which it was built gives it an imposing appearance. Mr. August Beinke, the architect, designed the plan. The seating capacity is about 800. Every comfort and detail has been attended to in the auditorum which is cosy and bright and finished in pleasing Romanesque frescoe. The ground was broken on the site July 1, 1880, and, complete, the edifice has cost $30,000. This Shabboth evening, at 6 o'clock p. m., the new temple was dedicated with appropriate exercises.

WILY WAKEFIELD.

The Arch-Conspirator a Convict at Last.

His Sentence Confirmed by the Supreme Court,

And His Immediate Commitment to the Penitentiary Ordered.

A Condensed Review of His Remarkable Career in St. Louis.

Lem Wakefield behind the bars, attired in a zebra suit, will afford a picture pleasant for many a man to contemplate with his mind's eye. The man whose ambition it was to "run the town," and who did it through one or two police administrations, was placed in the Penitentiary to-day to serve a two years term for perjury, the Supreme Court having affirmed the findings of the St. Louis Criminal Court. The case has been pending for nearly two years. What might be called Wakefield's dynasty came to a sudden conclusion in 1879. For five or six years before that he had claimed to dictate who should compose the Police Boards of St. Louis, and to control administration after administration. The men who stood in his way he blackened. The gamblers and lottery men believed in his power with the Commissioners, and submitted to steady assessments, amounting much of the time to $2,000 a month. The money was used in averting raids and interference, they were led to believe by the ring-master's representations.

In 1879 the storm burst and in the revelations which followed personal reputations by the score were smirched. Men learned for the first time that Wakefield had been claiming control over them for years with a view to subserve his purposes. When Governor Phelps appointed Nidelet and Ladd and the Legislature investigated them, Wakefield's peculiar methods were made public. When William Hyde, the editor of the Republican, made criminal information against Wakefield for defamation of character in alleging that money was paid him by a gambling ring, depositions were taken and more of the details of the wily intriguer came out. At length common war was made upon him. The Grand Jurors summoned him into their presence and demanded from Wakefield under oath an explanation of his relations with Pate, France and others. He testified that he had acted as a lawyer for them, and had not obtained money from them to bribe Police Commissioners. They on the other hand swore that they had never engaged Wakefield as an attorney, and that they had paid him large sums of money to give to Police Commissioners to secure them immunity. On this discrepancy was based the indictment for perjury. After the bill had been found, Charles P. Johnson and J. C. Normile were engaged to conduct the prosecution, and they have conducted the case to the successful conclusion told in the Jefferson City telegram to the POST-DISPATCH. The leading spirit in the Grand Jury which investigated Wakefield's operations and fastened the lie on him was J. B. McCullagh, the editor of the Globe-Democrat.

The victims of Wakefield's nefarious plots have been numbered by scores. One of these was none other than R. C. Pate, himself accounted a man of no little shrewdness. He was led to believe in Wakefield's alleged power with the Police Commissioners and paid to him thousands of dollars which he was led to believe passed into official hands. It was Wakefield who poisoned Pate and Tom Smith against each other after they had been partners and friends for years. He did this so successfully that two men, both determined and desperate, went armed for weeks, intending to kill each other on sight, only learning how they had been both deceived through the revelations of a third party. On one occasion Wakefield plotted to have Pate sent to the penitentiary for having counterfeit money in his possession. A stranger was sent to the house with instructions to play at keno for an hour or two and then to hand Pate a large package of decoy money to be placed in the safe for keeping till morning. The conspirator carried out his part of the programme, but Pate had been warned of the plot and had stepped out when the deposit was offered. Had the queer been taken a raid would have been prompted, and the presence of the stuff in the safe would have constituted a prima facie case of having counterfeit money. When Pate learned two years ago how he had been outwitted and deceived, he backed the prosecution of Wakefield on the perjury charge, gave his testimony willingly and paid the legal fees throughout. H. M. Smit, the pawnbroker, found relationship with Wakefield exceedingly unprofitable. When the arch conspirator had downed the Missouri State Lottery he induced Smit to believe there was a bonanza in the Academy of Music scheme, a franchise obtained from the Legislature ten years ago to build a temple to Thespis by the profits on a series of drawings. The incorporators dropped the matter years ago, and the papers, worthless for any legitimate purpose, fell into his hands. It cost Smit $10,000 to know Wakefield.

W. C. France, the lottery manager, bled well under the conspirator's manipulation. Under the impression that Wakefield controlled the Police Board, France gave up to him a third of the profits of his business for a long time. This third, which Wakefield was supposed to divide with several high officials, amounted to $2,000 a month.

Wakefield's friendship or enmity seem to have been alike disastrous to those who came in contact with him. Defilement followed. That he was or claimed to be the friend of Nidelet and Ladd ruined their prospects for confirmation as Police Commissioners, and left them in an unenviable position when the Legislative Committee had done listening to what various parties had heard from Wakefield from time to time.

He was a strong and a long hater. At an early period in his history Wakefield, while a gambler, was arrested at Kansas City on a charge of theft, made by Tom Blennerhassett, a sporting man. The article taken was a coat. After some time Blennerhassett was induced to let up, and there was no prosecution. Wakefield never forgot the arrest, and years after, through the use of money, procured the faro dealer a term at Joliet. On several occasions during this earlier portion of his career he got into trouble, and when he essayed a role above that of common gambler it worried him to know that his picture, with the name of Alanson Bankson attached, adorned the Rogues' Galleries of the Pinkertons and other detectives. He finally paid a thousand dollars for the assurance that these pictures had been removed and destroyed.

Ten years ago Wakefield was keeping a keno house on Fourth and Elm streets, and had not then obtained any public notoriety other than as a gambler. The Legislature in 1871 passed a bill for the filling of the slough ponds south of Choteau avenue. It provided for a commission and for a contract which promised to be valuable. Wakefield suddenly gave up his keno business, and it was announced that he had resolved to reform and to turn his attention to legitimate business. While ostensibly devoting his attention to slough ponds he organized a gambling ring and arranged a regular system of collections, representing to the gamblers that he stood in between them and the Police Board, claiming to disburse to officials the greater part of the fund. The slough pond job never panned out, and in 1872 Wakefield bought the old Varieties Theater, on Market street, and proceeded to transform it into a grand opera house. This was another step ostensibly toward reform, and Wakefield was elevated to a social position, having his picture painted in a panel of the ceiling. In every move that this man made somebody was the victim and it was no ordinary squeeze. Stilson Hutchins furnished the sacrifice for the opera house and when he parted partnership with Wakefield it was by dropping $25,000.

Through all the vicissitudes of the Opera House property Wakefield clung to an interest in it until his sudden downfall in 1879. One after another ventured in and gave up after swelling the profit and loss account, but the conspirator held on extending the courtesies of the theater to men of prominence, and associating with them at the Planters' House. Wakefield had no trouble in conveying the impression that he was the power behind the local police administrations. He started on the down grade, however, from the time he attempted first to make a tool of and then to destroy Detective Stiles. The latter was connected with the Metropolitan department when Wakefield decided that for his interest the Missouri State Lottery must be destroyed. He chose Stiles as the man with nerve and shrewdness enough to do it. He communicated his plans to him and simultaneously the detective received his orders from the Police Board. He made the raids under these instructions when the lottery property that was worth $40,000 was destroyed. Wakefield furnished the money on which this vigorous prosecution was carried on. It was Wakefield's war. Stiles left the force and started his agency. Wakefield tried to retain his hold and to make use of the detective. There came an open rupture and Wakefield declared that the detective was doomed. It was a bitter fight, lasting eighteen months. Stiles worked incessantly to checkmate Wakefield. It was through his agency that William Hyde learned how his name had been used by the conspirator. Pate and Smith were made to understand each other when they were going about prepared to blow each other's heads off.

France was induced to cease the payment of the $2,000 monthly to Wakefield. Evidence was furnished of Wakefield's wiles when the depositions were taken, when the Legislative committee was investigating, when the Grand Jury took up the case. The conspirator met his match in the detective, and that is how he comes to be behind the bars to-day. It is the result of a feud in which all the bitterness and shrewdness men are capable of were exercised. Wakefield's recreation was with women. He was notorious for his amours, and his victims were numbered by scores. His line of intrigue when not employed in money making was developed with the fairer sex. When occasion offered he turned his powers in this direction to account to carry out his plans. With a mistress he prepared a trip to catch a Police Commissioner whom he wished to see decapitated. The Commissioner yielded to the charms and a Governor was actually invited to St. Louis to witness his appointee's assignation. The circumstances illustrate the lengths to which Wakefield's wiles had carried him.

WAKEFIELD BREAKS DOWN.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

Upon adjournment of the Supreme Court this morning the Marshal took charge of Wakefield and conveyed him to the Penitentiary, upon entering which he completely broke down and lost all his nerve. He was placed in a receiving cell to await his stripes which will be ready for him this evening, and in the morning he will be put at work. He says he never for one moment dreamed of the result reached by the Supreme Court, and it was a hard blow, and will be so to his family. "I was convicted on the false testimony of Pate and McKinstry. The latter swore that he saw piles of money in my room and he knew he lied when he said it. These men have, of course, a purpose in thus getting rid of me. What that object is is not for me to say. The St. Louis public is aware of all the facts in the case and can judge of this for itself. I am obliged for your calling, but I have no disclosure to make nor nothing to say I have two years to serve."

Mrs. Wakefield is a relative of Judge Hanna of Indiana.

The Turners.

Preparations are being rapidly pushed for the Turnfest which opens on Saturday evening. A small number of the visiting Turners came in to-day, but the bulk of them are expected to-morrow afternoon and Saturday morning. The committees appointed to receive the guests will be on hand at the Depot all day to-morrow. The work on the triumphal arches is being pushed to-day and decorations have been begun all along the route. The local Turnvereins are putting their gymnasiums in readiness to receive the visitors.

The Mayor notified Secretary Kalb this morning that he would have a fire engine stationed at the Fair Grounds during the Fest, if the Fair Ground Association would agree to pay all the expenses of feeding and keeping the men and horses.

EN ROUTE.

NEW YORK, June 2.—Thirty-three Turners of this city started this morning for St. Louis to attend the twenty-third annual festival of the American Turner Band.

Cook's Imperial in Europe.

Mr. Cook, President of the American Wine Company, has received advices, dated Paris, March 26, 1881, from Edward F. Noyes, the Prime Minister of the United States Legation in Paris, who has had analyzed a bottle of Cook's Imperial Champagne, and the report of the chemist, O. Girard, the chief of the Laboratoire Municipal at Paris, reports the same pure and equal to foreign champagnes. Also another advice from Mr. J. A. Bridgland, United States Consul at Havre, France, who writes under date of April 11, 1881, and in closing his letter says, "I have had French gentlemen drink your wine at the same dinners where the best French champagnes were served, and they acknowledged that the latter did not compare with your Cook's Imperial Champagne."

Emigrants to Southwestern Missouri.

About sixty families, aggregating nearly 300 persons, passed through the city yesterday on their way to Southwestern Missouri, where they expect to make themselves homes. The majority of these were from Indiana and Ohio, and they say that more will shortly follow them. Land is so dear in the States which they have left that they could not secure homes there, hence they have come West. A number of them were from near Cincinnati.

The Boiler Makers.

The striking boiler makers met at the hall, corner of Eleventh and Wash streets, this morning as usual. They expect to meet every day, compare notes and then adjourn and have a good time. They are not in the least concerned about the future, as they say the pressure for their work is growing so great that a concession by the bosses must soon be made.

THE JAMINET DIVORCE.

Mrs. Jaminet's Sister is Examined Before the Notary To-Day.

The depositions in the divorce suit of Dr. Jaminet against his wife were resumed this morning before Notary Sampson at Judge Pope's office. The testimony of Mrs. Clarke, sister of Mrs. Jaminet, residing at 2821 Olive street, a widow lady, was taken in behalf of Mrs. Jaminet.

The witness stated that she was brought up with Mrs. Jaminet under the same roof. Her sister's general temper and disposition was good. Witness considered her mild and aimable and her disposition was very forgiving. Dr. Jaminet's treatment of his wife had been observed by Mrs. Clarke. At times the Doctor treated her kindly and he was very tyrannically at other times. Before Mrs. Jaminet's return from New Orleans one Sunday she was five minutes late in getting home from church. The Doctor flew into a rage and said that he could not wait for anybody. There were many such instances of the Doctor's getting angry upon such slight provocation. Witness saw her sister the morning after she returned from New Orleans. She found her crying, and asked if it was on account of her health. Mrs. Jaminet replied that it was owing to the unkindness of her husband. She had received a shock and fright the night before because her husband did not meet her at the depot. The witness heard Dr. Jaminet say that his wife's health was very poor, her spirits being depressed with a knowledge of her disease. This was after her departure for New Orleans, when the Doctor called upon Mrs. Clarke. The Doctor said Mrs. Jaminet was suffering from a tumor and she could not stay in this climate for the summer for it would kill her.

The Doctor thought that Mrs. Jaminet would live two years but the time would come when she would have terrible suffering to endure, for the disease was incurable. The witness saw her sister the morning after her return from the South, about 10 o'clock, crying and unpacking her trunk. Mrs. Clarke told the Doctor that Mrs. Jaminet was suffering intensely and she asked him to go to her bedside. Then Mrs. Clarke asked him the cause of his curious treatment of his wife. He said that he would enter into no explanation whatever; all his wife needed then was rest. Mrs. Clarke asked the Doctor if his wife had given any cause for unkind treatment. He said; "She is a good wife, a good housekeeper, but I hate her." The witness asked the Doctor if their troubles could not be healed up and he replied: "No, she is my wife no longer." Her sister was in bed at the time, heartbroken at the Doctor's treatment. Mrs. Clarke remained with her sister all day and through the night, for Mrs. Jaminet was very ill and the Doctor was out professionally from 8 o'clock in the evening until 3 o'clock in the morning. Mrs. Clarke remained the second night again for the same cause. There was no desire to expose Mrs. Jaminet's condition to the servants, and Leontine was afraid to be left alone with her mother under the circumstances.

Mrs. Clark testified that when the Doctor returned home on the night of the 13th of April Mrs. Jaminet was suffering intensely, and she begged the Doctor to give her something to relieve her pain. The Doctor said she only needed rest, but afterwards gave her a powerful dose for the pain at her heart. In the presence of the Doctor and Leontine Mrs. Jaminet then proceeded to tell her sister the fearful things that the Doctor had told her; how he had proposed on her return from the South that they should live as man and wife to the world only for one year. Mrs. Jaminet asked if a woman had come between them, and the doctor said: "Not only one, two, three, four, five, six in the last ten years as one woman has been the same as another to me." Mrs. Jaminet said that she had begged her husband to deny this, but he said that he would deny nothing; he would admit all, and the previous proposition to live only to the world as man and wife for one year. Mrs. Jaminet told her husband she could not believe that he was such a bad man and he said: "I am no better than any other man, and perhaps worse than a great many." Leontine was then crying, with one hand on her father and one hand on her mother, begging them to stop quarreling. Her mother said to her: "Darling, I am afraid that I am dying and I may lose my mind. I want your aunt to know the terrible conversation."

After Leontine had been pleading with her parents she fell on her knees and cried: "God, have mercy upon us! Oh, God! Have mercy, mercy upon us!"

The Doctor then got into bed and was soon asleep. That closed the scene for the night. The witness was sent for by Leontine two or three days later; her mother had fainted and she was much worse. The cross-examination of Mrs. Clarke by ex-Governor Reynolds and John M. Glover was deferred until half-past 2 o'clock to-morrow.

CATTLE—Eastern and interior shippers and exporters entered the market early in the morning and up to 10 a. m. the various cattle scales were kept busy weighing up the purchases made by them. The prices realized were quite handsome and ranged from $4 85@6 per 100 lbs. Total offerings fair and bulk mainly of native steers from common to good. Thin and half fat native steers were in moderate supply and lower. At about 11 a. m. the reports came in and were bad, denoting heavy runs and prices lower all round, consequently this exerted considerable influence over buyers in our market, and then transfers were slow of disposal at declines of 10c per 100 lbs on all grades. Grass and wintered Texans in fair supply and slow of disposal at weak prices. Ruling quotations slow.

HOGS—As the offerings were large and the reports from Chicago and other points bad buyers in our market worked for declines and obtained concessions of 5 to 10c per 100 lbs on all grades early in the day. The market was active and by the hour of noon the bulk of the supply had changed hands with prospects of all selling before evening. Grass hogs dull; Yorkers $5 55@5 65; mixed packing $5 45@5 70; butcher and select $5 80@6 10. Pigs $4 85@5 20.

SHEEP—The moderate supply found prompt disposal at strong prices. The demand from the different classes of buyers has increased somewhat. Good and fancy sheep are nominal. Values steady.

Common to fair clipped $2 75@3 25; fair to good clipped $3 25@4; good to choice clipped $4@4 50; stock sheep $2 @2 50; wooled sheep not wanted.

Horses and Mules.

AMUSEMENTS.

POPE'S.

Rochelle, the promising home tragedienne, increases in popular favor at each of her metropolitan representations. Last evening she appeared at Pope's to a discriminating audience in what may be regarded a fair test role, Julia, in the "Hunchback." The handsome and graceful actress sustained the role with marked ability. It was an artistic, finished performance, gratifying Rochelle's friends and affording satisfaction to the critical elements in the audience. There were many hearty recognitions of the success achieved by the talented lady. Her support was very creditable. To-night Rochelle appears as the Countess in Love, and to-morrow, the occasion of her benefit, Evadne will be repeated. Ingomar has been selected for the matinee on Saturday. On Saturday evening the Hunchback will be repeated for the benefit of the stage department.

UHRIG'S CAVE.

The audiences attracted to the cool and pleasant West End resort, Uhrig's Cave, are large and fashionable, and Miles' Juvenile Opera Company present the popular opera, "The Little Duke," the attractive feature of this week's bill, with a smoothness and finish quite remarkable for little folks. There are some sweet young voices and pretty faces in the troupe of forty juveniles, and the leading roles are filled by gifted children of grace and beauty. Their repertoire embraces all the light, popular operas, and each will be presented at the Cave in turn during the two weeks' engagement. A down-town ticket office has been established at 517 Olive street.

THE OLYMPIC.

Miss Julia Hunt holds the Olympic boards this week, sustaining the title role in the musical drama, "Florinel," written for her by Sydney Rosenfeld. This house will be closed next week, but the week following Daly's Broadway Company will present "Cinderella at School," one of the prettiest attractions of the New York season.

COUP'S CIRCUS.

Preparations for the great Four Ring Circus and Parisian Hippodrome are going forward on the Nineteenth and Olive street lot. A mammoth tent covering an immense space with seats for 14,000 persons is in itself a feature of Coup's gigantic show. The exhibition will open on Monday and two performances will be given daily. One ticket will admit to the combined exhibition, circus, museum, menagerie and hippodrome.

A Pleasant Occasion.

The annual picnic of the students of the College of the Christian Brothers took place yesterday. The students assembled at the College early in the morning, and with the College band marched through the principal streets to the foot of Olive street, where the Chas. P. Chouteau was in waiting. When the boys, 200, in number, arrived, at the boat, they found it half filled with their parents, relatives and friends, all of whom had been invited to spend a day on the river. At 8 a. m. the boat pulled out carrying nearly 600 persons. There were a large number of ladies on board which added much to the pleasure of the occasion. A rapid run was made down to Thorn Landing, just below Harrisonville, where the boat was tied up for the day. The picknickers scattered through the woods and indulged in games and pastimes of all kinds. Several ladies and gentlemen took possession of the dancing stand. In the afternoon the band and several of the party marched up to Harrisonville and serenaded Mr. Thos. James and other residents, by whom they were handsomely entertained. Just about dusk the Chouteau pulled out and started upon a four hour trip back. This trip was the best part of the programme. The younger folks gathered in the parlor, which was lit up with the electric light and indulged in dancing for a couple of hours. Music and singing followed. Miss Ella Keating entertained the large company with several songs, which she sang in her usual artistic manner, eliciting great applause. Miss Friede and others also sang. Hon. James McGrath made a short address, complimenting the brothers and the captain of the boat for their services. Captain Thorwegan was too modest to come forward, but a reply was made for him. The boat made a landing about 11 p. m. It was the universal opinion that the picnic was a great success, and that this was mainly due to the efforts of Bro. James, Brother Virgil and the other gentlemen in charge.

TURF TALK.

The Trial Against Time at Cote Brilliante To-Morrow.

To-Day's Arrivals—Stakeholders' Plate—Lucky Betting.

There will be a special prelude to-morrow morning at the Cote Brilliante track. Sam Ecker has been manifesting a good deal of satisfaction over the private performances of Tidal Wave and some of the local turfmen have picked him up on a wager for a trial against time. Unless something unforeseen intervenes the bay gelding will be started about 9 o'clock to-morrow morning to do a mile in 1:46 or better. Tidal Wave is by Mr. Intruder, dam Anna Travis. The original stake was $250 a side, but since the match was made several thousand dollars in various sums have been put up. Ecker is backing Tidal Wave, and last night J. R. Watts, after inquiring somewhat into the merits of the gelding, put up $500. Roche, Christy and others are betting against the horse.

Eli Jordan, the veteran trainer, unloaded the Reynolds stable at the Union Depot this morning, and with his retinue of boys and a wagon load of camp baggage took up his march for the Cote Brilliante track. Uberto is the prominent one in the lot. There are half a dozen colts and fillies in the party. Mrs. Reynolds writes to Secretary Clarke, of the Jockey Club, informing him of the shipment of the thoroughbreds, expressing her confidence in old Eli's ability to do something at the St. Louis meeting with the representatives he brings.

McDaniels is expected here to-morrow morning with half a dozen horses, among which King Nero and Lettina will attract attention.

Milton Young, whose string is in exceptionally fine trim and who has carried things with a high hand at Cincinnati, will be here to-morrow.

The time for entries for the Citizens' Plate expired last evening, but two or three days of grace will be allowed for entries to reach here by mail. Among the probable starters may be mentioned Bancroft, Jim Malone, Jim Murphy, King Nero, Lucy May, Blanche J., John Davis, Minnie Lewis and Aranza.

No recent changes in odds have been made on the books for St. Louis events. The books, however, close on Monday evening.

A letter was received at Jockey Club headquarters this morning from Gen. P. B. Stark of Petersburg, Va., an old turfman. He will be here on the 8th, and will probably act as starter in some of the events.

J. R. Watts of Louisville is exhibiting a plethoric roll to day. In the interim while waiting to begin pool selling on the St. Louis races he visits Roche's and backs his choices. Yesterday every horse he picked won. He went especially strong on Giroffe the winner of the Fordham handicap at Jerome Park.

Roche's Turf Exchange.

Cincinnati and Brighton Beach races to-day and all the week. Pools sold daily and every evening. Combination yesterday paid on winning tickets $98 35 for $2 each. Exchange room, 714 Olive street.

MAY WHITE-MIXED.

The Case Before a Committee for Arbitration.

The May white-mixed corn deal came up before the Call Board Committee of the Exchange yesterday afternoon for arbitration, but after consuming nearly all the afternoon in arguments and listening to evidence bearing on the case, it was found it would be impossible to finish the case that day, so an adjournment was had until to-day at 3 p. m. As two of the Call Board Committee, D. R. Francis and A. O. Grubb, were directly interested in this case, President McEnnis appointed E. O. Stanard and Geo. Bain in their places, and these gentlemen, together with A. W. Evans, constituted a committee of "more than ordinary intelligence." Considerable time was consumed in discussing whether the case before the committee should serve as a settlement for all interested, this case being between Billingsley & Nanson, the longs, and Orthwein Bros., the latter firm not really original shorts, as they had the corn both bought and sold for May. A motion was made that all parties interested should pledge themselves to abide by the decision of the Corn Committee and settle all contracts at the price fixed by it, but the motion did not prevail, and Messrs. Redmond Cleary, R. C. Greer and several other shorts stated most distinctly they would not agree to this. In the evidence offered it was shown by Geo. W. Flanagan and Mr. Woods, commeal manufacturers, that purchasing No. 2 white-mixed corn on Tuesday at 55 cents they could turn it into meal at a profit at the market price of corn meal that day. Mr. Chas. F. Orthwein testified that No. 2 white mixed corn could not be exported from this market at 55c, and Mr. Rolla Billingsley admitted that his firm had sold this grade of corn free-on-board vessels at New Orleans at 55½c. To the charge of the longs that due diligence had not been shown by the shorts in filling their contract, and upon which charge the longs claimed 5 per cent, damages over and above the settling price, Redmond Cleary, Greer, Morton and others stated that they had the corn either bought in the country or held by customers there for whom they sold the May option. A large portion of this corn when received here failed to inspect No. 2 white mixed, hence it could not be delivered on contract. Mr. Cleary said he had purchased all of this grade on the market he possibly could at what he considered a reasonable price, and all of this grade he received from the country he applied upon his short contracts, paying the shipper the market price of the day for it. After other testimony bearing upon the case the committee adjourned until 3 o'clock p. m. to-day, when they expect to arrive at a decision. Quite a large number of merchants attended the meeting yesterday. An interested spectator was Mr. Ben. W. Lewis, of Glasgow, Mo., who, so it is understood, is the party for whom most of this corn was bought.

Last Night's Fire.

About 8 o'clock last night a fire occurred at Nos. 911 and 913 North Fifth street. The building, a two-story structure, was a part of the Planters' sale stables. The fire had scarcely been discovered when Engine Company No. 18 was on the ground and a moment later No. 12 arrived. Mike Horan, who drove the reel from No. 12, attempted to pass through the alley leading from Sixth street eastward, but just as his horses entered its mouth the flames shot across the passage, frightening his horses so badly that he was unable to make them advance or recede. Jumping from the cart he tried to unhitch the animals, but they dashed about frantically, and finally fell one upon the other. The fire had by this time become unindurable, and he was obliged to retreat, leaving the horses to perish. The damage to the building was slight, amounting to not more than $300. Chief Sexton says the horses can not be replaced with $400.

MR. S. PALMER, with the Gould Manufacturing Company, Seneca Falls, N. Y., thus writes: I have been afflicted with rheumatism for the last three years, and within that time have tried almost everything without getting any relief until St. Jacobs Oil had been used.

The Home of the Friendless.

To-morrow between the hours of 2 and 7 o'clock p. m. the annual reception at the Home of the Friendless will take place. The institution is located just below the Work House and is in a most flourishing condition. The ladies of the management invite the friends of the institution and the general public to visit the Home, and to inspect its internal arrangements and workings. Nearly $7,000 has been expended on the building during the present year, and the managers have thus been enabled to increase the number of inmates 50 per cent. The Home is doing a good work, giving shelter to scores of old ladies who would otherwise be without any protection, and the managers are deserving of great praise for the perfection to which they have brought the institution.

Simon Knowles was fined $25 in the Second District Police Court this morning for trespass.

Suspicious Circumstances.

A fire was discovered at 3 o'clock this morning in Michael Miller's cow stable, west side of Benton, between Davis and Marceau streets, Carondelet. An alarm was turned on from box 416. Before the engines arrived the frame, which was one and a half story high, was burned to the ground, and with it some small outhouses and a fence. Loss $75. The police have investigated all the facts and believe that the fire was the work of an incendiary.

RUPTURE CURED

OVER 600 CASES.

Since the establishment of the Vienna Institute in this city over 600 Ruptured Persons have applied to us for relief. This included every variety of Rupture, from the small, incomplete to the large double Rupture from thirty to forty years standing, measuring in some cases eighteen to twenty inches in circumference, as in the cases of Messrs. George Loehr, 1516 N. Market street; Frank Schmidt, 1512 N. Eleventh street and others. Many of those persons when they applied to us were utterly unable to perform manual labor on account of the frightful proportions of their Ruptures, and constant danger from strangulation. They are now completely restored to health. We have abundant proof from Physicians who have examined our patients, and the patients themselves will substantiate the above.

The Vienna Institute for the cure of Hernia is permanently established at 1113 Washington avenue, this city. Our method is not a surgical operation, is applicable to both sexes, does not interfere with one's occupation, and is not painful. Persons from the country can receive treatment and return the same day.

Reference: Dr. J. P. Flanders, 813½ Olive street, specialty, diseases of the genito-urinary organs.
